Description

Southern living meets urban convenience in this exquisite home located in the heart of the Historic District in downtown Georgetown, the charming riverfront town about an hour north of Charleston, South Carolina. Originally built in 1836 and restored in the early 2000s, 113 Meeting Street is located just a couple blocks from restaurants, shopping, marinas, museums, art galleries and the pickleball courts at East Bay Park. Features of the home include wrap-around porches, heart pine floors, beautiful trim, plantation shutters and spacious living and dining rooms. The center island kitchen features beautiful custom cabinets, granite counters and stainless steel appliances including a Thermador natural gas range and a bar with extra storage. Upstairs are two spacious bedrooms, each with their own private bathroom. The gorgeous grounds (about .25 acre) are beautifully landscaped and fenced. The home and garden have been meticulously maintained, and feature a "swim spa" hot-tub that convey's with the property, or can be removed. Need another bedroom or two? The lot is large enough (about .25 Acre) to accommodate an addition to the home or a guest house. Ask to see the plans to do so. To consider owning a piece of Georgetown's history, make an appointment to see 113 Meeting Street!
