Description

Tucked into the quiet curve of Hickory Run, a Powdersville favorite known for its southern charm, and neighborly waves, is a home that feels like it's been waiting for just the right someone. Positioned at the very back of the neighborhood, where the pace slows and the trees grow taller, this sweet cottage-style beauty offers something most homes don't: a yard that looks like a dream but doesn't require a single Saturday with a mower. It's taken care of for you, so you can spend your weekends doing anything but yard work. With a brand new roof overhead and fresh paint and flooring throughout, this home looks like new but with the warmth and character that only time can add. Inside, the floors stretch out in rich, easy tones, and sunlight pours in from every direction. The color palette is clean and comfortable, with just enough edge to feel current. There's a softness to the walls and a freshness to the space that makes it feel instantly calm. A fireplace anchors the family room—just enough to take the chill off a Carolina winter morning or to add a flicker of charm on a rainy spring day. The kitchen opens wide to the living space, keeping conversations flowing and everyone connected. There's a breakfast bar where coffee can be sipped, homework can be supervised, or biscuits can be buttered without missing a beat. And just beyond, the covered porch beckons a spot for iced tea and quiet evenings while the sun dips low. But the real surprise might just be the backyard. Wide, flat, and fenced, it stretches out with enough room for fetch, firepits, or garden dreams. With no one behind you, privacy is a gift, and peace settles in easily. Upstairs, every bedroom has been treated to the same thoughtful updates, no carpet underfoot, just clean lines and easy upkeep. The primary suite feels like a retreat with its large private bath, double sinks, and a walk-in closet generous enough to hold every season of the year. Guest rooms are well-proportioned and bright, with a hall bath ready to handle morning routines or weekend guests. Throughout the home, there's a sense of care. Not just maintenance, but care. As if someone made decisions with the next homeowner in mind choosing finishes that would last, spaces that would function, and a layout that simply makes sense. Hickory Run is more than just a pretty place. It's a community, the kind where summer days are spent poolside and morning walks are a daily rhythm. Located in Anderson One schools and just minutes from everything Powdersville has to give, this home pairs peaceful living with true convenience. Some homes just feel good. This is one of them.
